Tonara: This is the mandatory software for our online platform. It allows me to write every student's assignment and send it to your device. Students can track their practicing and I can check them daily. I can record pieces on this app and send it so they can listen to their songs. This system has a free-to-download software, and it is free to use by students(no in-app purchases), as Tonara only charges a subscription fee to my teacher account.

Flashnote derby(6.99 CAD): This is an app to practice notes. It works really well for younger and beginner students who need to practice note recognition. It also can work for anyone who is a bit unsure of their notes and want a fun way to practice them. The app is super easy to use and it is fun. You click on the notes you want to practice and then click on the little figure on the lower right side. A note appears and you click on the correct answer. Each unit works with 10 notes and then you re-start. Younger students or beginners can work with just a couple of notes at a time—no more than 5. Older students can click on as many as you want up to 10.

Tenuto app(5.49CAD): I found a good app for theory. It practices notes but also has a lot of general theory on it and also includes ear training. It's quite fun to use and is very educational. It's not as flashy and cute as Flashnote Dirby but it is very good for students who have taken piano for more than one year. and need more of a challenge in theory.

Staff Wars(1.39CAD): This is a fun game for note learning and to get speed and fluency .

Rhythm Apps:

Rhythm Swing: This is a cute app for beginners and students who have taken 1 or 2 years of piano. It works on getting rhythm steady and understanding how to keep a beat and understanding what note values are and how they work in music.

Please come back and check often for further updates! We will be keep looking for great online resources!

Note: Prices listed above are as of Aug. 2020, on App Store provided by Apple Inc. All app prices may change by developers without notice. Some softwares may not be available for some platforms.